- The Griffith Observatory, opened May 14, 1935, is located in Griffith Park, the largest municipal park and urban wilderness area in the United States. The Observatory has welcomed nearly 70 million visitors since its opening. The building and its grounds are closed to the public for a three-year renovation. Public operations, free of charge, continue at the Griffith Observatory Satellite in the northeast corner of Griffith Park.
- The Griffith Observatory was listed on the California Register of Historic Resources in 1994.
